

The Beatrice S. and David I. Miller Education Seminar Series
Indiana University School of Education, Bloomington, Indiana is honored to welcome

Dr. Lee Shulman

President of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching and

Charles E. Ducommun Professor of Education Emeritus, Stanford University

Dr. Shulman is past president of the American Educational Research Association (AERA) and received its highest honor, the career award for Distinguished Contributions to Educational Research. He is a member of the National Academy of Education, having served as both vice-president and president. He is also the recipient of the American Psychological Association's 1995 E.L. Thorndike Award for Distinguished Psychological Contributions to Education.

"Education and the Professions: A Perspective on Professing and Scholarship"

Wednesday, March 21st

1:00-2:00 p.m.

School of Education Auditorium

(Reception to follow in Atrium)

In this presentation, Dr. Shulman will draw upon the Carnegie Foundation's programs that study education for the professions, from law to teaching and from engineering to the clergy. Since the 1910 Flexner Report on medical education, the Carnegie Foundation has been concerned with how higher education institutions prepare students for professional careers. The Foundation's work rests on an analysis of the common features of professions and thus of professional education. These features will be discussed and illustrated, the character of current studies will be discussed, and implications for the new Carnegie studies of education for the PhD will be reviewed.

Wednesday, March 21st, from 4 to 5 p.m An informal seminar with Dr. Shulman, for faculty and students, will be held in Room 2277
